

we are prepared to furnish any ball demanded by the Court. And we would like to know if the District Attorney will assist to a speedy trial."

"The defendant asks for two weeks in which to withdraw his plea. If necessary," replied the District Attorney, "I don't see how I can answer that question in view of his request."

"I have a trial starting at 2 o'clock this afternoon which will occupy my time for ten days, and I have to inform the District Attorney," said Mr. Undermyer. "It seems to me the District Attorney might inform us if he will assist to a speedy trial."

"I am willing to go to trial as soon as you are ready," put in the District Attorney.

"Your Honor," said Mr. Undermyer, "I consider the bail of $10,000 excessive. I am not going to talk on the merits of this case, although the District Attorney has declared that more proof is forthcoming. If I were disposed to talk I might say a great deal."

"I would be very glad to hear you," said Mr. Whitman, sarcastically.

Justice Davis announced that he would fix bail at $10,000. Hyde, with his counsel and bondsmen, went upstairs to the Board of Prisoners, where the District Attorney's office, on his way the indicted official stopped frequently to shake hands with friends, who assured him of their good wishes.

Hyde Makes a Statement.

Before leaving the building Hyde gave out the following statement through his secretary:

"For more than two months a campaign has been carried on against me by the District Attorney and other officials, with the active and hearty support of two newspapers of large circulation in this city. On April 19 I asked the public to suspend judgment until the close of the case, stating that nothing had been done by me as Chamberlain of which I or New York need be ashamed. No official act of mine has been influenced by an improper motive."

"It has taken two months to indict me before a body that does not hear any defense or even explanations. I have no doubt of the outcome and my complete exoneration and I shall endeavor to await it with patience and equanimity."

District Attorney Whitman made the following statement after the arraignment in the Court of the City Chamberlain:

"Charles H. Hyde was arraigned on an indictment charging him in two counts—first, with bribery, under section 372 of the Penal Laws, and second, with taking an unlawful fee under section 1365."

"It is charged in the indictment that on the 23d day of August, 1910, being then City Chamberlain, Hyde, being then City Chamberlain, and Joseph Q. Robin, who was then a director and the chairman of the executive committee of the board of directors and the owner of a majority of the stock of the Northern Bank, that if the Northern Bank could loan $100,000 to the Carnegie Trust Company, he—Hyde—as City Chamberlain, would immediately increase the amount of daily balances of the funds of New York City on deposit with the Northern Bank."

"The indictment charges that the loan was made and deposit was subsequently increased."

No Mention of Smith Loan.

It will be noted that the District Attorney's statement makes no mention of the loan obtained by Smith, the City Chamberlain's secretary from the Carnegie Trust Company when, it is alleged, Smith transferred by various banking transactions to Hyde. Nevertheless, this loan figures prominently in the evidence taken by the Grand Jury and Smith was one of the witnesses against his employer. The specific indictment does not charge Hyde with taking any money in the Northern Bank transaction.

Tax Commissioner McElroy, who went on Mr. Hyde's bond, said today:

"Hyde called me up at 6 o'clock last night and said to me he was indicted. I said to him, 'Don't worry.' He told me that he expected to beat the case, which was trumped up against him in order to injure Mayor Gaynor. 'I am more annoyed over this attack, being merely aimed at the Mayor through me, than at the charges against me,' said Mr. Hyde to me. I told the young man that undoubtedly a reaction would set in in his favor and he would have more friends than ever."

Probably the most elated man in the Criminal Courts Building was Joseph Q. Robin. Early in the day he was brought over to the office of the District Attorney in the elevator of the Criminal Courts Building. Robin said that he was pleased to learn that Hyde was not alone in misfortune. Hyde is under the impression that the indictment of Hyde is a substantial guarantee of his escape from any punishment for his looting the Northern Bank and Washington Savings Bank out of nearly $500,000.

who testified before the Grand Jury in the proceedings leading up to the indictment of City Chamberlain Hyde: Joseph Q. Robin, William L. Broome, Anthony Stumpf, Charles A. Broome, Warren S. Stannin, Harold Jacobs, Robert L. Smith, Charles C. Hays, Gilbert R. Hendrickson, Linton L. Lewis, Robert B. Moorehead, Joseph B. Reichmann, William J. Cummings, Henry J. Walsh, Joseph L. Reilly, John J. Walsh, Jacob C. Simon, Thomas F. Murphy, William B. Young, John Smith, William J. Cummings, Edmund P. Fisher and Thomas H. Condon.

There was no hurry about the course of the indicted official from his home to the court this morning. He did not leave his apartment at the Carlton House—a part of the Hotel—until 11 o'clock. With him when he stepped out into the street and signaled for his automobile was Stephen C. Baldwin, the lawyer, his personal friend, who is also counsel to William J. Cummings and Robert B. Reichmann, the indicted directors of the Carnegie Trust Company.

Natally Dressed, as Usual.

Always a dapper dresser, Hyde was attired today with scrupulous attention to the latest sartorial fashion. He wore a long, black cutaway frock coat with appropriate striped trousers and waistcoat. In his black tie he wore a big, striking pearl. His round, full face was pink and there was no sign of trouble in his eyes.

"You haven't lost your smile," remarked a reporter.

"Why should I?" replied the City Chamberlain.

The automobile of Mr. Hyde went from the Carlton House to the residence of Samuel Undermyer, Hyde's counsel, at No. 615 Fifth avenue. Mr. Undermyer had been waiting. After a consultation there the indicted official and his lawyer started downtown.

Long before the doors of the courtroom of the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court were opened a crowd had assembled outside. The room was packed to the walls within a few minutes after admission was allowed. Out in the corridors and in the open space on the ground floor the crowds made passage a difficulty for those who had business requiring movement from place to place. The main floor and the mezzanine galleries accommodated the crowd which had not assembled at the Criminal Court Building since the trial of Harry Thaw.

CUMMINS TO TURN ALL HIS PROPERTY OVER TO CREDITORS

William J. Cummings of the Carnegie Trust Company appeared today before United States Commissioner Thomas Alexander in the Federal Building as a witness in the bankruptcy proceedings instituted against him by three of his creditors, whose claims amount to $115,000. The object of the hearing was to discover the true assets of Cummings, whose total liabilities are stated to be $200,000, with assets of but $100,000.

Mr. Cummings said he had made no list of his assets, but would furnish one to the receiver, Payson Merrill. His household goods, he said, were in his home in Saxville, Conn. His insurance policies would be turned over to the receiver, as well as his automobile, now in transit here.

"Will you go this afternoon," he was asked, "with the receiver to your private safe in the office of the Carnegie Trust Company and permit him to examine its contents?"

"I will," he replied. "All of my property will go to my creditors, and they are welcome to it."

The hearing was then adjourned until Tuesday next at 10 o'clock.

MRS. SHONTS TO ENDOW A SCHOOL WITH $500,000?

"It's All News to Me," Says Mr. Shonts, Laughing at the Report.

(Special to The Evening World.)

CINCINNATI, O., May 2.—Mrs. Theodore P. Shonts, wife of the millionaire New Yorker and mother of the Duchess de Chaulnes, accompanied by a number of prominent Kentuckians, reached here this morning in her private car. She is preparing to establish a school reformatory for neglected girls near Middletown, Ky., and will endow with half a million dollars. Her philanthropic work has aroused through a sense of patriotic duty. She is quoted as saying that Eastern Kentucky womanhood shall not be forgotten down on the hill.

At the Plaza Hotel it was said today that Mrs. Shonts left the city last Sunday to visit the Lincoln Memorial University at Cumberland Gap, Tenn., of which she is a patron.

Mr. Shonts, when seen at his office, No. 165 Broadway, this morning, laughed at the report of the endowment, saying that he was not interested in a reformatory for girls in Kentucky.

"It's all news to me," he said, "and I would not care to have anything in it. I would at least have an inkling."

FIRE IN APARTMENT HOUSE.

West Sixty-sixth Street Dwelling Damaged by Blast and Water.

A fire which broke out late this afternoon in the apartment of J. Doran on the top floor of a five-story apartment house at No. 12 West Ninety-sixth street, completely gutted that floor and broke through the roof before the firemen had it under control. All of the apartments in the house were seriously damaged by water.

Frederick John Griffin of Engine Company No. 18, was overcome by smoke while working a line of hose on one of the upper floors and was rescued by a surgeon from the David Wright Hospital.

HORSES IN COLLISION.

Runaway Police Mount Crashes Into Civilian Rider in Central Park.

The chestnut steed of Mounted Policeman Henry E. Schellier ran away on the bridge path in Central Park today. Almost immediately the big animal collided with a horse ridden by Otto Coleman of the Central Park Riding Academy.

Both horses went down in a heap with their riders, and then got up to continue their race, until their riding was interrupted by two stocks, when Mounted Policeman Philip Austin and Thomas P. McGuire stopped them.

The two men, who were thrown were unhurt.

BRIDE, DESERTED FOR RICH WIDOW, COMMITS SUICIDE

Granddaughter of Col. French, Millionaire Hotel Man, Inhales Gas.

FRIEND FINDS HER BODY.

Brief Wedded Life Terminates in Tragedy After Break With Husband.

Heartbroken because her young husband had abandoned her after becoming infatuated with a wealthy widow who has a suite in the Ansonia Hotel, at Seventy-fourth street and Broadway, Edna Hallway, twenty-six years old, a bride of a few months and a granddaughter of Col. Richard French, millionaire owner of the historic French's Hotel, once situated on part of the present site of the Pulitzer Building, committed suicide by inhaling gas early today in her room at No. 187 Amsterdam avenue, where she lived with Mrs. F. P. Kenyon, wife of an employee of the Ansonia.

Until recently, following the break with her husband, Mrs. Hallway had been employed as stenographer for a high official of the Aeolian Piano Company at Thirty-fourth street and Broadway. Worry over her marital trouble, her mother said this morning, had unfitted her for work and recently she obtained leave of absence and spent most of her time grieving alone over her husband's desertion.

Her joy in living ended last night when she came home from a fruitless search for her husband. It is said. She was greatly disheartened and told her friend, Mrs. Kenyon, she was going right to bed. Apparently she started to do so, retiring to her room in the ground floor apartment looking out on Amsterdam avenue.

Mrs. Kenyon, unwilling to intrude upon her grief, left her alone and saw nothing and heard no sign to indicate the tragedy that was preparing beyond the frail partition separating her room from her friend's.

About 1 o'clock this morning Mrs. Kenyon was awakened by the uneasy actions of her dog Jack, who aroused her by whining and sniffing about the base of the door leading into the young wife's room. Next she noticed the odor of gas and realized from her own drowsy and headachy condition that she must have inhaled the deadly fumes emanating from the room.

Springing up, she pounded on the door of her friend's room, but it was locked. Getting no response, she sent for a policeman, who gained entrance through the front window and unlocked the door.

Mrs. Hallway was found stretched on the floor, her head near a gas stove and the tube of the stove, which had been disconnected, tightly clamped in her set teeth. She was lifeless.

Dead Several Hours.

Dr. Botsford, who came from Flower Hospital in response to an ambulance call, said that Mrs. Hallway had probably been dead several hours. The body had little of the usual appearance of one who had been killed, and the young wife's face reflected much of the attractiveness that her friends said had characterized it in life. She was fully dressed and evidently had sat up grievously for hours before deciding to end her life.

The young wife's body was left on the floor as it was found, to await the coroner's view, and a half-smile and slightly parted lips, one hand lying across her breast, on the third finger of which was a plain gold band and a handsome amethyst ring, the sole gift she possessed from her husband, but which she paid for herself, said Mrs. Kenyon bitterly.

Mrs. Hallway, who was the youngest daughter of Phoenix W. French, son of the old Colonel, met Hallway last August while the latter was on a trip East from his home near Columbus, O. He was a dapper young man with a winning smile, and the pretty girl fell ardently in love with him. They were married at the home of the bride's widowed mother, Mrs. Mary C. French, in Mount Vernon. For some time they lived happily together. Then through B. P. Kenyon, husband of the young bride's friend, and who is leasing the hotel, Mrs. Hallway was obtained a position as bookkeeper in the fashionable hotel, and the young pair seemed destined to an ideal married life.

Husband Grew Indifferent.

For a time all went well, but finally the young bride noticed a growing difference on her husband's part. He stayed out late at night, giving as an excuse pressure of work at the hotel. But soon it became apparent that Hallway's indifference had some deeper cause, and through Mrs. Kenyon the bride heard rumors of her husband's infidelity to a wealthy widow much older than himself and a resident of the hotel. She was a little on the shady side of forty.

Finally the widow's name became known to Mrs. Hallway and she chided her husband, half jokingly at first, over his infidelity.

The dead wife's mother, Mrs. Mary C. French, who had been summoned from Mount Vernon to the Kenyon flat as soon as the tragedy was discovered, told the closing chapters of her daughter's blighted romance.

"Poor Edna—my poor little Edna," she said, "her heart was broken. She adored that man and he treated her shamefully. We learned all about the woman. She has much wealth—millions, we have heard—and she loved my daughter's husband away. She was utterly infatuated with him. At Christmas she gave him
